Lewis in Court to Answer Contempt Charges

SEC. KRUG IS SERVED WITH A SUBPOENAE

Man Named Lewis, No Kin of John L., Cites Cabinet Member to Appear Before Committee

DISCUSSING PIPE LINES

Washington, Nov. 27.—(P)—A man named Lewis, no kin to John L., served an unprecedented congressional committee subpoena upon Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug today.

The subpoena server, who said his name was Lewis, was waiting with the documents when Krug arrived at the interior department. The cabinet officer accepted it without comment.

Krug, carrying the brunt of the government's battle against John L. Lewis, was commanded to appear before the house surplus property investigating committee at 1 p. m. Monday for questioning about the coal strike.

The committee voted unanimously to draw the subpoena when Krug failed yesterday to appear in response to an "invitation" issued two hours earlier. The committee wanted to know why the 143,000,000 war-built "Big Inch" and "Little Inch" pipelines are not moving natural gas from the outflow to the coal-shoot east.

The "invitation" to Krug was issued by the committee after assistant Secretary C. G. Davidson testified that the interior department is "actively considering" feasibility of using the 1,500-mile pipelines for transportation of natural gas during the coal crisis, but had reached no decision. The lines, now idle, were built in wartime to move oil from Texas into the east when German submarines crippled the oil tanker fleet.

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 27.—(P)—A Virginia official who sought to serve a new legal complaint on John L. Lewis reported today he had been advised that the United Mine Workers' chief spent the night away from his home here.

J. F. Moriarty, deputy city sergeant, appeared early this morning at Lewis' home with the summons. But, later, he told reporters that a servant at the residence informed him that Lewis had not stayed there last night.

The summons directs Lewis to appear Monday before the Virginia state Corporation Commission to show why the United Mine Workers' Union should not be enjoined from selling memberships, as a violation of the Virginia security law.

"If I don't serve the papers today," Moriarty said, "Lewis will then tacked on his door to-night."

"I've served papers on Lewis before. He never does anything."

If Lewis spent the night in Washington, across the Potomac river from Alexandria, he apparently returned there after going home late yesterday afternoon. Witnesses saw him enter his residence about 5 p. m.

Washington, Nov. 27.—(P)—A survey of delegates indicated strongly today that the 54-member United Nations Political and Security Committee will adopt a proposal for an immediate world inventory of troops at home as well as abroad.

Confident that the proposal will be approved, spokesmen for both the United States and British delegations said they hoped the committee would be able to vote on the issue within the next 24 hours and clear the way for resumption of the discussion on the veto.

Both Great Britain and the United States are insisting that all members of the United Nations report on the number and disposition of their troops at home and abroad by Jan. 1, 1947. The Russians have agreed to report on troops abroad but not at home.

A survey of delegates, however, indicated a majority of the powerful political and security committee would support British and American views on the troops census, although the British proposal for an inspection board to verify the troop data was expected to be defeated.

Most delegates doubted a vote would be taken on the issue today, since Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, and possibly U. S. Senator Tom Connally (D-Tex.) and British Delegates Philip Noel-Baker, might speak again today.

Molotov was expected to speak again in view of his latest proposal yesterday asking the United States and Britain if they were ready to report immediately on atomic and jet-propelled weapons in their peace-time military machine.

This proposal was expected to set off a new controversy. Noel-Baker said Britain was no more in favor.

Washington, Nov. 27.—(P)—A quiet move is underway to deny a seat in the new congress to Vito Marcantonio of New York City, it was learned today with disclosure that a congressional committee is investigating his election to the house.

The move has the backing of Rep. John E. Rankin (D-Miss.), has crossed verbal swords with Marcantonio on many occasions during the latter's 10 years in congress as an American Labor party representative.

Holding both American Labor and Democratic nominations, Marcantonio was reelected Nov. 5 over Republican Frederick Bryan Hanigan, who lost the Democratic nomination to Marcantonio in the August primary.

Appealing for his friends to vote for Bryan, Hanigan said he had entered the primary against Marcantonio "solely for the purpose of driving from public office the mouthpiece in congress for the Communist forces in this country."

A majority vote of the house can deny a seat to any member-elect, and for any reason. Any member may offer a resolution either denying him his office or denying the right to sit pending an investigation by a house committee.

Chairman Priest (D-Tenn.) of the house campaign investigating committee told reporters the committee wants to find out whether the fatal beating of Joseph Scatreggio shortly before the polls opened was part of a plan to intimidate voters. Scatreggio was a poll worker for Bryan.

Fair Weather and Plenty Of Sunshine Promised Tomorrow

By the Associated Press

There was rain, snow and sub-freezing and below zero temperatures on today's weather map but fair weather and plenty of sunshine for most of the nation was forecast for Thanksgiving Day.

A new mass of cold air from Canada spread through the north and plains states and upper Mississippi Valley today and temperatures dropped to below zero in northern Minnesota. Four to eight inches of new snow had fallen in northern Minnesota and spread rapidly westward across Minnesota and northern Iowa into Wisconsin.

The rain area which extended through the Ohio and lower Mississippi Valleys yesterday, moved westward and rain was reported falling from Maine to Georgia, with temperatures dropping as much as 20 degrees in some sections.

Mild weather continued in the extreme southeastern part of the country.

Federal forecasters in Washington today promised clear skies and "plenty of sunshine" for most of the nation tomorrow.

A special holiday forecast by the weather bureau said:

Fair weather with plenty of sunshine will prevail over nearly all parts of the nation on Thanksgiving Day, with the exceptions of the Pacific northwest and the northern Rocky mountain sections and in northern Florida and along the Carolina coast where generally cloudy weather will provide a rather gloomy day.

A Pick-Up for the Pickets

There's nothing like hot crullers and coffee on a wintry day on the picket line, and these students are happy to serve their teachers, who are striking for higher wages. The strike has closed 77 schools in St. Paul, Minn., leaving 36,578 pupils without classes.

Former Warren Physician Is Drowning Victim In Illinois

The many friends of Dr. Frederick Glenn Templeton, well-known former physician of this city, will be shocked to learn of his sudden death in a drowning accident which occurred early Tuesday morning at West Frankfort, Ill.

From details received here, it is learned that Dr. Templeton and three friends were preparing to hunt ducks on an artificial lake near Frankfort early in the morning, when the boat in which they were passengers suddenly capsized. Another member of the party was also drowned, but the remaining two were rescued.

Frederick Glenn Templeton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Templeton of Clarendon, was born August 22, 1909, at Olean, N. Y., coming to Clarendon when he was one year old.

He attended Clarendon schools and was graduated from Warren High School. Following his preliminary schooling, he entered the University of Buffalo, and Canisius College at Buffalo, where he was graduated from the pre-medical course. He then entered Loyola University School of Medicine in Chicago, Ill., being graduated from there in 1931. He interned at St. Catherine's Hospital in East Chicago, and at the Cook County Hospital in Chicago.

Returning to Warren in 1934, he began the practice of medicine, continuing until 1940, when he entered the Medical Reserves of the United States Army. He attained the rank of major in the Coast Artillery, serving two years overseas with the 137th General Hospital in England.

Coming back to this country, he served at Fletcher General Hospital at Cambridge, O. Following his discharge at that hospital, he held the position of resident physician at the Hotel Sherman in Chicago for one year, leaving there the following May to begin his duties as chief surgeon at Union Hospital at West Frankfort. This position he still held at the time of his death.

He was formerly a member of the Warren County Medical Society and the staff of Warren General Hospital, was a member of Warren Lodge No. 223, B. P. O. E., and of the Coneywag Club.

Surviving him are his wife, Virginia, and one son, Frederick, both of this city; his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Templeton, and a sister, Mrs. Gilbert Brown. (Turn to Page Nine)

Bootjack Hill Is Scene Of Accident

Ridgway, Nov. 27.—(P)—School children going home from school narrowly escaped being hit when a truck, loaded with 3,000 gallons of gasoline, raced down Bootjack Hill, out of control, here yesterday.

Dee Burfield of DuBois, the driver, stuck with the truck as it reached the foot of the hill, ripped through an iron fence, tore down part of Harry A. Hall's porch, knocked down a tree in his yard, and wound up against the side of the Samuel Murphy residence.

Then Burfield, dazed but only slightly injured, climbed out of the cab. He was brought to Ridgway hospital for treatment.

Gasoline flowed freely from the wrecked truck but there was no fire.

PROPOSAL FOR TROOP CENSUS GAINS FAVOR

Survey of Delegates Indicates Strongly Committee Will Adopt Plan for Inventory

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 27.—(P)—The political committee of the United Nations assembly today over-rode Soviet opposition and approved a British resolution declaring the proposed international troop inventory and the question of arms reductions were parts of a single general question.

Molotov was expected to speak again in view of his latest proposal yesterday asking the United States and Britain if they were ready to report immediately on atomic and jet-propelled weapons in their peace-time military machine.

This proposal was expected to set off a new controversy. Noel-Baker said Britain was no more in favor.

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 27.—(P)—A survey of delegates indicated strongly today that the 54-member United Nations Political and Security Committee will adopt a proposal for an immediate world inventory of troops at home as well as abroad.

Confident that the proposal will be approved, spokesmen for both the United States and British delegations said they hoped the committee would be able to vote on the issue within the next 24 hours and clear the way for resumption of the discussion on the veto.

Both Great Britain and the United States are insisting that all members of the United Nations report on the number and disposition of their troops at home and abroad by Jan. 1, 1947. The Russians have agreed to report on troops abroad but not at home.

A survey of delegates, however, indicated a majority of the powerful political and security committee would support British and American views on the troops census, although the British proposal for an inspection board to verify the troop data was expected to be defeated.

Most delegates doubted a vote would be taken on the issue today, since Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, and possibly U. S. Senator Tom Connally (D-Tex.) and British Delegates Philip Noel-Baker, might speak again today.

Pennsylvania Holds Key To Piping of Natural Gas From East to Ease the Fuel Situation

Harrisburg, Nov. 27.—(P)—Governor Edward Martin said today "there must be compelling reasons" for Pennsylvania to favor use of the Big Inch pipelines for the transportation of natural gas into the Keystone State.

The governor made the comment at a news conference in response to questions about what Pennsylvania would do if the U. S. interior department recommended such use for the $143,000,000 pipelines.

Pennsylvania must agree to permit use of the lines for gas, instead of petroleum or petroleum products as provided by easements given by the commonwealth at the time the lines were built to transport petroleum from Texas to the eastern seaboard.

"We have not decided yet whether we would approve or reject a recommendation," Martin said.

"There are long term economic problems which must have our consideration. Owing to the fact that Pennsylvania produces all of the anthracite available in America, there must be compelling reasons for us to favor any change in the economy which would affect these great Pennsylvania industries."

The governor's office said a check of the land easements given by the state when the lines were constructed showed many of them limited their use to petroleum and petroleum products.

"It would definitely require a change in the permits before they could be used for gas," a spokesman said.

Administration officials, however, were reluctant to discuss what action would be taken should a request come from the federal government for changes in the easements. No applications have been received so far.

Protests against the change were made several months ago by representatives of the United Mine Workers Union, the anthracite and bituminous industries and Pennsylvania railroad.

Easements for the pipeline across forests, state game lands, highways, rivers and other state property were granted by the state government as a war measure. Some limit the use of the pipelines to petroleum and petroleum products and only for the war's duration.

The Athens government has charged the guerrillas are being reinforced and supplied from Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania. Premier Constantin Tsaldaris has announced his intention of putting the complaint before the United Nations in New York.

Franklin, Nov. 27.—(P)—A 67-year-old retired oil worker and his wife were killed yesterday in an accident on Route 322, six miles south of Oil City.

L. P. Say of Van died in Franklin hospital from head injuries suffered when the car in which they were riding collided with a gasoline trailer truck. His wife, Elsie, 57, was killed outright.

Bradford, Nov. 27.—(P)—Funeral services will be held today for Christian H. Messerly, 64, senior member of the J. L. Yerdon Co., purchasing agent for the United Refining Co. of Warren, who died of a heart attack Monday.

The body will be taken to Williamsport for funeral services and burial there tomorrow.

Messerly, a native of Lock Haven, once served as secretary to the president of the Grit Publishing Co., of Williamsport. He also was a member of the Bradford city council from 1931 to 1935.

Survivors are his widow, Blanche, and two daughters.

Staubenville, O., Nov. 27.—(P)—A measure to provide extra police to fight crime headed toward a showdown today after receiving a second reading before city council last night without discussion.

The bill would allow Safety Director Alfred Schaefer to appoint "one or more private policemen" to help enforce state and federal laws here.

It will be read a third time and voted on Dec. 10. If approved, the bill should become effective 30 days later. Its introduction followed a campaign by a dozen ministers to rid the city of alleged vice.

County Departments Give Much Attention To Mutual Aid

Following a motion of Councilman Charles Miller at last council meeting that mutual aid agreements should be negotiated with all fire departments in the county that care to avail themselves of the various county departments. The proffer is one that is of as much use to Warren as it is to towns in the county. Warren in the event of a big fire would meet certain difficulties that would require aid and an arrangement whereby trucks and men could be secured from county towns would be of immense value. The same holds true of the towns in the county when they meet a fire too big for them to handle.

Letters were sent to all departments in the county by the clerk of council under instructions. The matter is one that has to be acted upon at meetings of the county departments and as yet few replies have been received. Russell has signified its willingness to take part in the mutual aid plan and Chief Laverne Johnson, of Youngsville is favorable to it but his department has not yet taken action. Tidoute is also favorable and it is to be hoped that Sheffield, Sugar Grove and Clarendon will see fit to sign up the agreement.

With the mutual aid agreement in force a fire school for all county firemen attached to an active fire company would naturally follow so that all men would be trained to work together. Adapters for hydrants and hose threads are now carried by most of the trucks in the county which would allow them to move in on a fire with little trouble.

Youngsville has some particularly fine equipment which could well be used in event of trouble in Warren. They have three modern trucks all equipped with pumps which in event of a fire in Warren's business section could be used in lifting water from the mill pond and used in tandem to get the water to the fire.

Clarendon also has a fine truck, as does Sheffield and others of the county departments.

Chief Albaugh is visiting the various departments of the county and it is planned to make a highly efficient group of the county active firemen.

Oil Producers' Association Is Proposed

A movement is under way in the Middle District, embracing the territory between Butler and Kane, to form an independent oil producers' association similar to the Bradford District Oil Producers Association. A meeting to determine sentiment in this locality was held here one evening last week.

Oil men interested in becoming members of such a body were urged to communicate at once with Frank E. Lyons, named acting secretary at last week's meeting, who can be reached at the office of the Pennsylvania Oil and Gas Management Associates, Room 6, Oil City First National Bank Bldg., Oil City.

Another meeting is to be held on Wednesday, Dec. 11, time and place of which will be announced, and Mr. Lyons is desirous of hearing from a number of local producers before that time.

The Bradford Association has been most active in compiling data on its field and, in addition, has been extending its field for its own purposes in the absence of a local organization.

The new association would collect similar statistics on this region, hold regular periodic meetings at which problems would be discussed by competent speakers; follow the current developments of air and gas repressuring on production in the nearby fields; furnish accurate information to the State Bureau of Mines, State College, the Bradford District Oil Producers Association and other similar agencies. In turn, producers would be in a position to utilize findings of these bodies for their own use, to promote and stimulate oil production in the Middle District.

CLEAR AND COLD

Tomorrow, according to the old weatherman, will be clear and cold. The mercury will sink lower this evening and chills will be rampant over this area. However, with the clear and cold weather Thursday many are planning to take to the woods in a hunt for rabbits and other small game while others will have a last fling at bass and muskies.

WELL, NOW DRILLING

The new test gas well being put down on the old Ewer farm at Carter Hill, near Corry, was spudded yesterday and actual drilling is now under way. Some unexpected delay in the start of operations had been experienced following erection of the rig but it was indicated today that with the hole actually started, drilling on a round-the-clock, night and day basis, would be started.

Figures received from the office of Superintendent John G. Rossman indicated a total of 3,084 persons visited the various public school buildings of the borough during American Education Week. Visit being defined as a person visiting a particular classroom, building totals are as follows: High school, 791; Beatty, 2,058; East, 200; Home, 127; Johnson, 500; Lacy, 120; McClintock, 63; Seneca, 35; South, 190.

SALVAGE DEER SKINS

The various locals of the International Fur and Leather Workers Union CIO has announced that it will participate in a nation-wide campaign to salvage deer skins to be tanned and shipped to Europe to be made into articles of clothing for the destitute war victims. During the war, the union collected skins which were made into trigger finger mittens for the armed forces. Funds derived were used to purchase two ambulances, a mobile canteen, cigarettes and Christmas packages. Thousands of deer skins thus were utilized for the war effort through the volunteer work of the leather workers and the hunters.

Deer Season Will See Army Of Redcoats Invading County

Inquiry at the Finley Sport Store and at Mack's News Stand, headquarters for sportsmen, developed the fact that both are prepared to supply hunters with all needed paraphernalia for the deer season. Both stores have received numerous inquiries relative to the best territory and places to secure rooms. This betokens a large army of hunters who will come into the county for the season.

Just what the toll on the deer herd will be is hard to tell as the reports are that deer are plentiful but the proportion of bucks to does is an undetermined question. Experienced woodsmen who frequent the woods walking pipelines, etc., say there are plenty of deer. They are not so large as they were last year and the racks are not developed as much as they should be.

Many camps in the county have been reserved by out of state hunters and they have been put in shape for the influx of sportsmen. Many parties from this city will spend tomorrow at their camps putting them in shape to move in over the weekend. Arrangements are also being made by restaurants and other eating places to care for the visitors and the lists sent out by the Chamber of Commerce of places for hunters have been widely circulated and have met with a good response.

Ammunition is not so scarce as it has been for some years past and most of the stores handling

Funeral Of Tidioute Boy To Be Friday

Services in memory of Jack Wayne Lineman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lineman, Tidioute, who died in the Warren General Hospital Tuesday morning from complications resulting from a gunshot wound accidentally inflicted Monday night by a chum, John Martin, will be held from the Tidioute Methodist church Friday afternoon at two o'clock, with the Rev. W. Sipe, pastor, officiating. Interment will be made in Starr cemetery, near Knox, Clarion county.

The death of the unfortunate Tidioute Boy Scout, it was revealed Tuesday, was hastened by lobar pneumonia, as a result of shock from the wound and subsequent operation. Monday night the lad was not considered to be in critical condition, although attending physicians were apprehensive over complications that might result from a severe cold he was suffering at the time of the accident. The bullet, which was removed Monday night, was revealed to have lacerated the liver and gall bladder, but not in a manner to be fatal. He was cheerful to the end, and frequently expressed sorrow for his chum who inflicted the injury.

Sherrill L. E. Lander and Coroner Ed Lowrey spent Tuesday afternoon in Tidioute interviewing Martin and others connected with the tragedy. Their conclusion was that the shooting was entirely accidental. It was divulged that the death gun was a gift to young Martin from his grandfather, and that it was taken from a drawer in the Martin home Monday evening by young Martin without the knowledge or consent of his parents. He could not remember whether the single shell was in the chamber at the time or whether he placed it there before starting on the fateful trip. The first story of the accident, apparently agreed upon by the two boys in an effort on the part of the young victim to shield his companion, was that Jack was wounded by a stray bullet. The facts were cleared up before the injured youth was brought to the hospital, but young Lineman insisted to the last that it was accidental and he hoped Johnny would not be punished.

Two Boys Are Missing From Local Homes

Report has been made to police that two local boys have been missing from their homes since yesterday afternoon and it is thought that both lads are anxious to enlist in the armed forces or get a job in some institution. The report was made by the father of one of the boys.

They are Laverne Storm, 17 and William Wedlock, 16. Both are large for their age and the Wedlock boy is six feet tall has dark hair and wore army pants and a navy pea jacket when last seen. His companion Laverne Storm is five feet eleven inches tall and has brown hair and wore brown pants, a plaid scarf and no hat when he left home.

The state police teletype has carried a description of the two boys and it is expected they will be located soon.

Erick Nyström, 226 North Carver street last evening struck the parked car of Marvin Reiff, RD 1 Clarion. Both cars were damaged to some extent.

"In America, the People Smile"

A distinguished foreign visitor was asked what one thing about America impressed him most. "That's easy," he replied. "In America, the people smile."

Smiles come readily to people who are free... who enjoy the world's highest standard of living. And, rightly, Americans set a day apart at this season to give thanks for the freedom and plenty that are theirs.

They give thanks to those whose pioneering courage and self-reliance opened up their land, brought its broad reaches together under one flag and made that flag a world-wide symbol of liberty and opportunity.

They give thanks to those whose thrift and enterprise built the greatest industrial system in history... and with it transformed the natural wealth of America into comforts and conveniences for all the people.

For the bountiful harvest... for the matchless products of its factories... for the privileges, and the duties, of free men—the opportunity to live, work and save as each desires—for all these, America gives thanks. For these, the people smile.

Erie Doctor Speaks Before Local Rotary

"Our Water Works" was the subject of an interesting talk before Warren Rotarians, given by Dr. R. P. Baker, of Erie, a member of the board of governors and former president of the American College of Osteopathic Surgeons. Dr. Baker illustrated his message with blackboard diagrams showing the functions of the kidneys and bladder in the human body, and made comparisons with the operations of a municipal water system. He pointed out certain disorders that occur, and explained how the other parts of the body are affected.

Dr. Pierce, also of Erie, a guest at the meeting, and Dr. Baker were both introduced to the club by Dr. R. D. Smedley, of Warren. Visiting Rotarians were A. C. Van Nort, of Marienville, and Allan Scilly, of Pittsfield.

Following a practice of several years, the club was pleased to have as its guests two high school seniors, Elwood Beckwith and Edward Wollaston. The boys were introduced by Howard Alexander, who cited some of their activities and achievements.

Denton Moon Of JHS Quits Coaching Job

Coach Denton Moon, leader in the realm of Jamestown High School sports for 17 years, last night announced his resignation of his coaching duties. He started coaching in 1926.

Mr. Moon stated to Jamestown Sports Editor Frank Hyde last night at 11 o'clock in an interview, that he "thought 17 years was enough." It is thought that one of the reasons for resignation was poor health. Mr. Moon will remain, however, at Jamestown High in the role of math teacher.

No new coach has been named at this time and the position is wide open for next season, the successor probably being named this winter.

He was named football coach in 1926 followed two years later by the basketball coaching job. He followed the football job until 1937, when he was succeeded by Coach Taff. Later Coach Buchwald took over the job only to relinquish it to Denton Moore again in 1940. Coach Moon has held the job steadily in the past few years, keeping up the bitter competition with Warren, incidentally, holding a decided margin over the locals by defeating them five times, tying them once and losing to them once.

THE FRUIT OF CONCERTED EFFORT

The customary Thanksgiving editorial is not an easy assignment this year. One cannot put down the usual phrases about "a nation lifting up its thankful heart" without a sense of journalistic inaccuracy. Thankfulness implies a certain amount of contentment and humbleness. And who can truthfully say that those words are an apt description of our national feeling today?

The emotions with which this country greeted Thanksgiving a year ago seem more than 365 days remote. The war was won, and a great number of the men who had fought it were reunited with their families. There were shortages then, and a beginning of the domestic troubles that have plagued us ever since. But there must have been a deep gratitude in many hearts which is sadly absent now.

This Thanksgiving Day finds us a nation in which discontent and bitter complaint have risen to a point where it is useless to deny them. It finds us with abundant food and more material comforts than graced our homes a year ago. But even the increased abundance and the added comfort seem almost an accidental outcome of wrangling and bungling which consume a distressing amount of America's time and attention.

For some perverse reason it takes war, that most brutally stupid of human activities, to call forth the highest moral qualities of a people. That sobering fact that was never more clearly evidenced than in the war just past. Americans united to produce and fight, forgetful of self and of differences. From battlefield and ship, from factory and farm, came abundant proof of the kindness and brotherhood of which the American people are capable.

Today, unhappily, those same people are doing much to dishonor the victory which their united good will achieved. Selfishness, curbed for so long by nobler qualities, has burst its bonds and taken command. The lines of economic and social battle appear to be drawn up and ready for a senseless fight which none can win and which, unless halted, can only succeed in delaying and perhaps destroying the common good which all in their right minds know we must achieve.

Today we might all do well to think seriously about the origin and tradition of this holiday. The first Thanksgiving Day was celebrated by a group of men and women acutely aware of the fact that God helps those who help themselves. The feast that day was the fruit of a concerted effort without which the feasters would have perished. And the feast was a pause, not a truce. The next day those men and women resumed their concerted effort, for the common peril still remained.

The sympathy of people throughout the county is extended two families in Tidoute, sorrowed over the tragic shooting mishap that resulted in the death Tuesday morning at the Warren General Hospital of Jack Lineman, whose trip to a Boy Scout meeting was cut short by a bullet from a .38 calibre revolver carelessly fired by a pal who was toying with the weapon. The fatality emphasizes again the danger and sadness that can result from having firearms in the home. John Martin, 15, coached in the use of weapons by his grandfather and father, disregarded parental warnings not to take the weapon from the drawer where he kept it under lock and key, and as a result his chum and neighbor is dead. There's a moral in this tragedy that should sink deep in the hearts and minds of all young people.

Every man, woman and child of Warren could be seated comfortably in a railway passenger train more than four and one-half miles long if all the new cars built by the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Company since V-J Day were combined into one super train. The company, world's largest builders of railway cars, has just delivered its 251st car, as each car seats an average of 60 persons. Warren's 14,891 residents would all be assured of a seat.

An excellent way to start the Thanksgiving holiday would be to attend the annual community service to be held this evening at the First Baptist church. The public is cordially invited and those in charge are hoping for a large attendance.

Warren's "white way" last evening reminded of wartime days, when conservation orders were made necessary by another guy named Hitler.

Interesting Items Taken From The Warren Evening Times

In 1926 The Kaplow Brothers of New York City, who recently built two new storehouses adjacent to the Leonhart Block on Pennsylvania avenue, west, have leased the larger of the two rooms to Kaufman Bros. and Company of New York City, operators of chain furnishing stores.

The last of the concrete turtles at street intersections was removed this morning and are being stored away for winter. The "Dagger, G. Show" signs, which graced Pennsylvania avenue near the Carver House, have also been dismantled by the street department.

Miner F. Hanson, who formerly assisted on the delivery truck of the G. Gifford Smith company and who installed the radio equipment sold by the company, has been given complete charge of the radio department, both buying and selling.

Robert and Benton, sons of David Bairstow, of Bairstow Studios, last evening treated the firemen of the city to an exhibition of the Cine Kodak and Kodascope pictures of the Jamison refinery fire. Fire Chief Gordon states that the film showed much more distinctly than those produced by the professional picture films and shown in the local theater.

County Treasurer White today issued hunting licenses to seven men, all living in the vicinity of Cleveland and Youngstown, Ohio, and they will hunt for 10 days throughout the section, establishing camps as they move.

In 1936 James Robinson, 91, of Erie, stepped shoveling his snow-covered sidewalk long enough to offer his recipe for longevity: "I never married, and therefore, never worried."

Bill Welsh, 118 Dartmouth street, reports killing a bear Tuesday morning on the Walker branch of the Hemlock Run. Mr. Welsh left Warren about nine o'clock, drove to the Hemlock section, walked a mile and had the bear before 10 o'clock. The animal weighed 250 pounds.

R. W. Reynolds, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., will lead the discussion of the weekly Life Study Club at the "Y" Tuesday evening on the subject, "How Can We Improve the Life Study Club?"

Severe winter weather continued to grip the section today, with an added snowfall this morning which brought out highway department snowplows and cinderling crews in order to keep roads open. Between four and six inches of snow fell this morning.

A Lesson in Conservation

We were sitting on Bill Webster's porch the other night, chatting over a glass of beer—when the talk turned to forest preservation, soil erosion, and other things that affect a farming community.

Judge Cunningham speaks up: "It's all right to worry about conserving our natural resources," he says, "but there's a far bigger problem when it comes to conservation—that's preserving our democratic way of life, our sense of personal freedom, our respect for one another's rights."

MACKENZIE'S Column

BY J. M. ROBERTS, Jr.
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The United Nations debate this week over a nose-count of troops may well go down in history as "the mystery of Lake Success." It is reminiscent of the stage production of the chariot race in Ben Hur—a lot of sound and fury on a treadmill.

It all began last August when Russia, following her usual line of seeking to arouse weak nations against their "capitalist oppressors," charged the U. S. and British troops were on the soil of such countries as Greece and China with grasping designs. Russia asked for a count of all troops on non-enemy soil. U. S. and British delegates picked up the ball with a straight face—they all know within a corporal's guard the size of each other's contingents and said fine but let's count all troops away from home anywhere. Molotov finally agreed, and said let's not only count them, but start talking about reducing and disarming them. This brought the jockeying into the stretch with the British replying all right, if we're going to talk about disarming, let's count the troops at home as well as abroad, and get down to business on a police force for U. N.

Embarrassment by then had become counter-embarrassment. It's the Russians who have been fogging up the police force outlook to the point where the U. N. military staff has been able to do nothing. Talk of inspection to verify the reports if the nations decide to report, of tying it all in with (Turn to Page Five)

Do You Have Children?

(Communicated)

There cannot be too much said on this subject of CHILDREN. I personally believe it is time for a few of the parents to pass their views on to another through means of the paper. It seems that now every time one picks up a paper he reads nothing but grief, sadness and humility in some form or other. We must remember that our children read not only the "funnies" nowadays, but the entire paper, and it is up to we parents to fully understand the meaning of all these articles so we may explain them to our children in such a way that they will profit by them. In days gone by, parents could say "do this and do that", but not so today. Why? The respect for the word "boss" has gone and parents are either "pals" or else. We must remember we brought these children into this world. They did not ask to come here and it is up to we parents to guide them in the right way to the best of our ability. This can be done by "knowing ourselves" and remembering that we were children once ourselves. It is a true statement that a child cannot understand an adult, but an adult can understand a child, or should be able to.

In larger towns there are many outside activities for children, such as YMCA and YWCA, as well as shows and libraries, and any parent who has a chance to participate in these should do so. Go with your children and meet their leaders and help wherever you can.

We in smaller communities have none of these things and so it is up to us to figure out ways to give our children that which they so rightfully deserve.

Be it city, town or hamlet, we all have one organization in which the main topic of conversation is children. That great organization is the Parent-Teacher Association.

Why is it, then, when the leaders ask for help from the parents they are refused by so many?

Why is it, then, the meetings are so poorly attended? Cannot we parents realize that this is the only organization where parents and teachers can discuss their problems together?

A building is only as good as its foundation, and that foundation needs repairs now and then.

What about our children? Within a few years our children will be taking over this country. Are we parents getting them prepared in THOUGHT, WORD AND DEED?

THINK IT OVER, PARENTS.

Research Helps Bring Back Spreading Chestnut Trees

BY HOWARD DOBSON
AP Special Washington Service
Washington — (AP)—Research has helped modernize the village smithy almost out of business, but it is bringing back its spreading chestnut tree.

That was the cheering word at the agricultural department today from G. F. Gravatt, who mourns the passing of the chestnut as much as would the mighty man of Longfellow's nostalgic poem.

Gravatt, a department pathologist, said the plant industry bureau has developed a hybrid which resists the devastating blight that by 1937 had overrun almost all the nation's chestnut forests.

The most successful blend so far, Gravatt said, is one that is three-quarters Chinese chestnut and one-quarter American.

New plantings of this hybrid are being pushed here and in the Mississippi valley as far south as Oklahoma, Gravatt added. Commercial nurseries are not able to meet the demand for straight Chinese chestnut trees, which are almost as good. The hybrid will not be available commercially for several years yet.

Gravatt said experiments indicate that chestnut orchards eventually will flourish again east of the Mississippi river.

The dreaded blight came from Asia in Japanese chestnut trees.

the department's pathologists believe. It was first discovered in 1904 around New York City, and three years later the government got to work trying to find a way of stopping it.

By 1910, the blight had desolated chestnut forests in New Jersey and around New York City. It spread in the next 10 years over Massachusetts, eastern Pennsylvania and part of Maryland, and by 1930 was into eastern Ohio, and West Virginia.

Since then, the blight has been found wherever there are chestnut trees east of the Mississippi river.

The department recommends the Chinese chestnut, but says the hybrid appears to be fully as resistant.

"The nut of the Chinese chestnut is larger than the American, but not quite so sweet," Gravatt said. "There is just a little something missing—a little something that is hard to describe."

The hybrid has proved successful for orchards and farm woodlot plantings, he added, and it begins to bear nuts about the fifth year. The nuts are a profitable commercial food crop, the lumber once was widely used, and during the war even diseased trees supplied most of the bark from which tannin was extracted for tanning leather.

"There's something about going out after chestnuts in the fall as a youngster that you just don't get over," Gravatt sighed. "I guess that's why I am so glad to see this new hybrid making good."

America's first monument to prohibition was a marble temple on the James river, Brems, Va., erected over a clear spring of pure water, in 1831, to the "sons of temperance."

of just letting it bounce out-of-bounds. One reason seems to be a desire to fight fog with fog—not to let the Russians get away with that propaganda that we're a bunch of wolves among the weaker nations. Another, I am told by a careful observer, is that our own American delegates are afraid for the public to learn that there's a lot of unmitigated propaganda, even approaching buffoonery, going on out at Lake Success. They don't want the public to become disgusted, fear the idea might spread that nothing serious is being done and that America better "take over" the world while there's still a chance of doing so.

Another reason has developed lately—that there is a chance, though slim, of running the Russians punt back for a touchdown. Supporters of this view hope that, by appearing to take the Russian propaganda at face value and treating it seriously, they can make it become serious. All right, they say to the Russians, since you've brought it up, let's really talk about disarmament.

A number of people at Lake Success to whom I've talked this week think this is the only excuse for the performance which has been put on. And most of them feel that even then it is like trying to gain weight by talking of eating.

Honor For Musician

Dr. LeRoy E. Campbell, who is not only head of the Warren Conservatory of Music and one of this community's leading musicians and teachers, but one internationally recognized as an authority on music and art, was paid unusual honor in the recital given Friday evening in the Conservatory concert hall. The entire program was devoted to music written by Dr. Campbell, both instrumental and vocal selections being used. The audience, which numbered many friends from Corry, Russell, Jamestown, Kane, Sheffield, Clarendon, Ludlow, Spartansburg, Tionesta, Akeley, and 40 persons from Youngsville, was the largest ever to crowd into the concert hall, and never in the experience of the writer has there been a more satisfied and enthusiastic audience. The piano numbers were played by Lillian Swanson, Youngsville pianist, with the composer appearing at the second piano for orchestral effects in the Concertstucke in C Minor. Vocal selections were admirably done by Byron Swanson, who heads the voice department at the institution and is an able musician and teacher.

Miss Swanson's numbers were played with great deliberation and artistic poise, all technical difficulties being met with ease. Especially well done were the Sonata in D Minor, Baha Yaga from the "Moorish Romance" suite, and the Concertstucke. Mr. Swanson sang each of his selections with exquisite expression, and especially pleasing to the audience was the song "Gethsemane." The climax to the vocal numbers came in the "Christmas Carol," sung by five of Mr. Swanson's pupils while he carried a very effective obbligato to the refrain. Adelaide Swanson, faculty member and accompanist, provided a satisfying background for the vocalist's work.

Shedfield, Jamestown and Corry groups each made a strong bid to have the program given in their respective communities, adding honor to both composer and musicians.

Niagara Falls Rite For Akeley Bride

A simple but impressive ceremony, which united in marriage Naomi Ruth Brasington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Brasington, Akeley, and James Manton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Manton, took place on Thursday, November 21, at 4 p. m., in St. James' Methodist church at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

The church was prettily decorated with baskets of white chrysanthemums and pompons, with candelabra holding tall white tapers. The Rev. James Kaehling officiated, using the double ring ceremony. The organist, Mrs. F. J. Schweitzer, played several selections, among them two favorites, "Always" and "Because."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a gray suit, with a corsage of red roses, and her only ornament a bracelet which was a gift of the bridegroom. The bridesmaid was Jennett Randall, who wore a black suit and corsage of gardenias. The bridegroom had his brother, Richard, as his best man and David Wilson acted as usher.

Both mothers had corsages of gardenias and yellow rosebuds. The wedding dinner was served to the immediate families at the Red Coach Inn, where the table was attractively decorated with bouquets of white chrysanthemums and white candles, with the traditional miniature bride figures topped the lovely three-tiered wedding cake.

The newlyweds left for a southern wedding trip, after which they will be at home to their friends at 5695 Ferry avenue, Niagara Falls.

TAKES CLUB OPENING TO BEAT THIS BID

By WILLIAM E. MCKENNEY
Written for NEA Service

There is a language in the play of cards in bridge. By that I do not mean the message conveyed by a scowl or a glare when your partner plays a particular suit, nor do I mean banging your card on the table to draw your partner's attention to it. There are players who pay more attention to the scowls and bangs than to the actual language of cards.

Chapter 27

CONRAD thought of Werfel. Gently he slid her hands under the covers and avoiding Joseph's eyes went to the window. The snow was greenish pale, the gathering shadows not dark enough to hide those tracks. At the end of the garden he saw a blurred figure bent close to the ground. It was a trick of his imagination. Then the man walked swiftly, eyes on the ground. It was Werfel walking through the trees till he was lost in the gloom. Conrad felt the revolver in his pocket; as he turned Joseph was staring over his shoulder through the window. Their eyes met.

"If anyone phones or Franz comes, say I'm in my room sleeping."

Outside, it was lighter than he imagined, perhaps his desire for darkness made it seem lighter. As he walked in the confusion of footsteps there came from far away the long drawn wail of a train - surely snow would fall any minute. Cautiously he followed Werfel's trail, vaguely conscious of the other tracks; his mind on Werfel nosing the scent. It would be all there in the snow like handwriting and Werfel would fit the pieces. ... Stephanie, Freya, Dana and Joseph. Silently, almost like a ghost he passed under the snow laden trees.

He came on Werfel so suddenly there was no time to draw back. The man was squatting examining the snow but he jockeyed to his feet as Conrad stopped out from the trees. He saw the eyes widen in sudden terror, then he pressed the trigger. He stood motionless looking at the huddle on the snow - a sparrow twittered nearby. Could this quiet calm within him be a consequence of murder.

He searched Werfel's pockets keeping the car key and a tiny notebook - some of the names in the notebook were on the list Glitz gave him. Then he pulled the body close to a snowbank and scooped the snow down over it. Now the sun vanished, leaving a purple haze over the snow and the sky directly above him was luminous, the first flakes of the approaching snow melted on his face.

In no time he found Werfel's car and he drove back over the highway which cut the woods higher on the slope, speeding to Freya, surer of himself than he had ever been before.

A faint light glimmered along the edges of the blinds in Freya's library so he tapped on the window - another tap, then Freya's face, then darkness again. Noiselessly she came out closing the door behind her, trying to smile away her alarm.

"Niel got away!" Tears came in spite of her smile. He held her by the shoulders.

"He's back. He met Stephanie in the woods, she was ill - he thought she was dying so he brought her back."

"How like him." Her voice broke. "... And Stephanie. ..."

"She'll be all right. But Niel must escape tonight while Von Beck is there and I need your help."

"Anything ... you know -"

"Of course. I'm leaving that car," he pointed, "here's the key. At 9:25 you must be by our stable: at 9:30 Joseph pulls the switch - our tractor occasionally blows the fuse - and Dana will get out the side door. But you'll head for the front driveway so if you start a minute before 9:30 you'll be in the front driveway as he reaches it. Then speed to the American military police in Munich. This car is faster than Von Beck's and you have the advantage."

"I'll get my watch by yours." She looked up at him soberly: "I'm so proud of you for helping him." He smiled strangely.

"He deserves help. Done this way Von Beck is compromised, so watch your timing. Now get your skis. ... time is short."

AS SHE knelt to fasten one harpoon he felt her warm breath on his hands and he thought it a good omen that she never questioned Dana's chances of getting out the door without being shot.

After sending Sigmund off duty for the night Conrad went to Niel. When he pressed the switch Niel didn't move in his chair near the fireplace. He put a hand on his shoulder.

"Is she dead?" His voice was deadly toneless.

"She's sleeping."

"Don't believe you. It's my fault really, I should never have stopped her like that." With a quick movement Conrad jerked him to his feet, steadying him by the shoulders until his eyes lost their stupor. "Yeah," he mumbled, "sure ... she's okay." His Americanism sounded strangely sane and virile in Conrad's ears.

"So the Yankee comes out in you, eh?"

"Why not, Conrad, my mother, is a Yankee and a damn good one." He swore again. "... once I wanted to marry Freya, isn't that a laugh - my own aunt!"

Conrad thought, he's taking it hard. Niel's eyes flashed antagonistically at him.

"And Stephanie married to a guy like Franz! You should have looked after her better than that, Conrad."

"Yes," answered Conrad quietly, "I should have ... I ..." He broke off, stopped by the look on Niel's face. Everything he felt for Stephanie was there and his eyes held with a steady, proud defiance. Conrad held out his hand: "I'll leave that to you to rectify."

"I want to see her."

Conrad left them alone. Niel stared down at her; but for the fact that he was leaving tonight he would never have wakened her. He sat on the edge of the bed and drew his fingers lightly across her cheek.

"Stephanie ... Stephanie ..." he said gently. The pale grey of her eyes glimmered under the black lashes, then her eyes were open, full of recognition. Again it struck him how easily she knew him from Franz. The same instant they heard a car turn in the driveway. A wild feeling of despair took hold of him, no time now - yet the rest of his life ahead of him. Conrad was knocking on the door. He raised her head from the pillow and kissed her until he felt her reserve break, felt her hand at the back of his head.

Conrad lurst into the room: "Come quickly!"

on PARTY-LINE telephones, too!

Thoughtful kindnesses go a long way toward making good neighbors. When you keep calls brief, when you space calls so that your neighbor gets a chance to use the telephone in between, when you hang up gently if you find the line in use—you're sharing the line considerately. That's what makes party-line service good!

Scores Of Devices Tried Out In Picking Of Cranberries

Coca Bay, Ore. — (P)—Those cranberries for your Thanksgiving turkey may have been gathered from the bogs a handful at a time in the ancient harvest method—but a score of mechanical picker ideas annually are making that less likely.

Here in the southwest Oregon cranberry bogs gradually moving into increasing importance in the industry, ideas for eliminating the back-breaking task of picking the berries by hand are sprouting all over.

One group of growers still believes that hand picking the berries which grow on ground-nugging vines, is the cleanest and most dependable method. But on the other side, in growing numbers, are those who want to speed the process. Their ways are nearly as numerous as the individuals.

On the simpler side are the raking methods. Where the bogs can be flooded, the cranberries may be raked loose from the vines, then scooped up as they float to the surface. Where they cannot be flooded, dry raking may be employed. Both require some cleaning process to eliminate foreign matter.

More complex is a mechanical picker developed by Joe and Matt Stankovich of Bandon. Thin aluminum prongs lift the berries from the vines and a ridged, rubberized canvas belt sweeps them back into a box. One man, they say, can pick 60 boxes an hour with their machine. A hand picker averages some 10 boxes a day.

Taking a still different approach, Harry May, school teacher, and Lewis McGregor, retired sand and gravel dealer, developed a suction picker for their bog at North Bend. Two large suction hoses are run over the vines and the suction pulls the berries loose and carries them into a collection box which has a cleaning baffle modeled on a grain cleaning device. The whole affair is mounted on a standard rubber-tired farm wagon. Two men, they say, can gather as much as could 40 hand pickers.

Growers, plagued throughout the war by a shortage of pickers have encouraged those with mechanical picker ideas and are experimenting with other ideas of their own. Just how extensive a hold machines will take on the harvest remains to be seen.

Birds soar higher and higher by coasting down through currents of rising air. The birds ascend because the air is rising faster than they are falling.

Plan Meeting Of Methodist Men Sunday

On Sunday afternoon, December 1, at three o'clock in the First Methodist church at Falconer, N. Y., there will be a meeting of men of the Methodist churches of the Jamestown District.

It is expected that all the Methodist churches in Chautauque, Cattaraugus counties in New York and Warren county in Pennsylvania will have representatives in attendance, making a group of at least 500 men. The meeting is being promoted by Allan Templeton, Warren, district lay leader; Edgar T. Welch, Westfield, N. Y., and Judge O. E. Black, Salamanca, N. Y., associate lay leaders.

Leo H. McKay, a prominent attorney of Sharon and the conference lay leader, will make one of the addresses. Another speaker will be Dr. Charles Cleland, of Kane. Dr. Cleland served in the Medical Corps of World War II, attained the rank of lieutenant colonel. In his home church, the First Methodist at Kane, he is the teacher of a large and particularly active Bible class. At the Falconer meeting, Dr. Cleland will speak on the subject "Stout Hearted Men."

Music will be a feature of the meeting. The group singing will be led by Harold Alhstrom, of Jamestown, and the special numbers given by the Missionaires Male Quartet of the First Covenant Mission church of Jamestown.

Will Install New Bishop December 5

Installation of Bishop Harold E. Sawyer as spiritual leader of the Erie Episcopal diocese will take place at 11 a. m. Thursday, Dec. 5, in St. Paul's Cathedral, Erie. Immediately following the service of installation, a brief address will be delivered by Bishop John C. Ward, now of Buffalo, who retired four years ago as Bishop of the Erie diocese.

Holy Communion will then be celebrated by the new Bishop. Installation luncheon will be served at 12:30 p. m. in St. Paul's chapter house.

The solemn ceremony, which will be attended by the clergy of the Erie Episcopal diocese, is open to the public.

Bishop Sawyer, elected to succeed the late Bishop E. Pinney Wroth who died last July, was consecrated earlier this month to the bishopric in Grace Episcopal church, Utica, N. Y., where he had served for several years as pastor.

Martin Aimed at Pennsylvania Farm But Ends In Senate Seat

By MARTIN H. BRACKBILL
Harrisburg — (P)—Pennsylvania's Edward Martin, despite his 45 years of soldiering, has an awful aim.

About a year ago, as he was approaching the last year of the Pennsylvania governorship, he set his sights on a quiet Pennsylvania farm where he thought it would be pleasant to spend the remainder of his life.

Instead, come January, he'll be in Washington beginning a six-year term as Pennsylvania's junior senator.

It must be pointed out, however, that it wasn't Martin's fault that he fired so wide of the target. The Pennsylvania Republican state committee bumped his arm. GOP bigwigs, eyeing the senate seat of Democrat Joseph F. Guffey, decided that 67-year-old Martin, governor, former state adjutant general, former state treasurer, former state auditor general, former state Republican chairman—was the man to put an end to new dealer Guffey's third term hopes.

Handsome, white-haired Martin, a party regular, said O. K. He campaigned in every one of Pennsylvania's 67 counties, denounced vigorously what he called Democratic control and radical flirtation and breezed to a thumping 600,000-vote victory.

Log cabin-born Martin has the ramrod carriage of the longtime soldier. He served in the Spanish-American war in the Philippines; in World War I, in which he was wounded and decorated for valor, and as major general commanding the 28th Division from 1939 to 1942. He has the soldier's traditional dislike for persons he considers lacking in patriotism or who put another country's interests ahead of Americans.

Something can be expected to be heard from Martin therefore regarding the employment in government of persons he feels are "pinks" or "fellow travelers." And he promised listeners in his campaign, he'll be in there battling for a balanced budget and a reduced federal payroll.

An old school Republican, Martin probably will give the party leadership little trouble. But, say his friends, this should not be construed as a promise of blind allegiance. On occasions Martin—a country lawyer—has demonstrated ed unmistakably that he has a mind of his own.

During the recent campaign Martin was able to work in only about 50 horseback rides. In 3½ years as governor before becoming a senatorial candidate, he managed about 300. This hobby, at least, he'll be able to enjoy on Washington's many miles of bridal paths.
